Andrews, Hastings; ject of stamp collectors, which he gives out in homeopathic doses when not too. out in homeopathic doses when not too busy with the routine business of his office.

There are several thrifty stamp collectors in New York who make handsome incomes from buying and selling stamps. A few years ago the postmaster general ordered a reprint of an obsolete design of a five-cent stamped envelope. It was a mistake on the part of the department and as soon as it was discovered all of these envelopes, about 10,000 in number, were called in. A stamp collector in New York in some way learned that these envelopes were soon to be called in, so he bought 1,500 of them before the postmaster had time to send them back to the department. After all the others had 'n called in he had a monopoly of the issue and he was selling them freely at five dollars each to "stamp cranks." He paid but five cents apiece for them, hence his profit was enormous.

There is another incident where a stamp collector learned that there would be a short issue of a certain denomination put in circulation, so he went to the contractor and purchased $10,000 worth of the new issue. He attempted to sell them at greatly advanced prices and complaint was made to the department. An investigation was ordered and the result was an unlimited number was ordered to be printed and the man who had invested in $10,000 worth was so badly stuck that he appealed to the department to redeem those he had not sold.

"Stamp collectors are a queer lot," continued the official, "for there are many of them in the business who will resort to almost any means to get hold of a rare issue. They keep a sharp lookout for all changes made in the ture of stamped envelopes and they manage to find out every time when a change in any design of stamp is contemplated."-N. Y. Times.

tricities in Temperature. According to the best medical authorities changeable weather, or what is known as "unreasonable," is not so bad in its effects as generally supposed. It applies to summer, but especially to winter. "Whenever the temperature during any of the winter months rises to an endurable height, and it is possible for one to go out of doors without acute suffering, we always hear prognostications of sickness and death Valentine Ledge No. 205 I. O. O. F., meets which are sure to result from a green every Thursday evening. Visiting brothers cordthe truth is it is the 'good, old-fashioned winter,' the 'seasonable temperature,' that kills. The incorrectness of the popular idea is well shown by the vital statistics for the first quarters of 1895 and 1896 in England and Wales, which we find summarized in the British Medical Journal of May 16. These two periods of time formed a great contrast in so far as the general temperature of the air was concerned. In the former year the mean temperature of three months was 35.2 degrees Fahrenheit, which was 3.7 degrees Fahrenheit below the average, while in February it was no less than 9.9 degrees Fahrenheit below the mean of that month. In 1896 the temperature of the three months was 42.3 degrees Fahrenheit, or 3.4 degrees Fahrenheit above the average. The public health fully reflected those noteworthy differences in temperature. In 1895 the deaths in the first quarter amounted to 170,501 and the death rate was 22.8, or 1.1 above the average. In 1896 the deaths in the corresponding period numbered 136,-809, and were in the proportion of 17.9 deaths annually per 1,000 persons living, which rate was 3.9 below the average. The increased mortality in 1895 was chiefly among persons aged 60 years and upward, of whom 60,454 died, giving a death rate among such persons of 10.90, or 15.4 in excess of the mean. In 1896 32,208 persons aged 60 and upward died in January, February and March, and the death rate was 69.2, no less than 26.2 below the average. These statistics furnish the fresh evidence of the killing power of frost and of the beneficent influence of a mild temperature. But popular beliefs are not to be overthrown by statistics, and if we are blessed next winter by a mild temperature and absence of snow there will be plenty of physicians whose surprise will be equaled only by their disappointment that there is not more

The ice-covered regions of the far north doubtless contain many treascres which the inhabitants of sunnier climes would fain possess. Deposits of coal have been found in Greenland, and precious metals are known to exist within the arctic circle. Whether these riches of the north will ever be distributed through the marts of the world is a question for the next century to answer. At present the most northerly mine in existence is said to be that of Omalik on the Fish river in the northwest corner of Alaska in latitude 65 degrees north. It produces lead and the even tenor of its way, gaining silver, principally the first named, and its lodes are very rich. But the severity of the climate is a serious obstruction to the working of the mine, which has and that great financial crash comes to be abandoned every year about the beginning of October, only to be resumed late in the following spring .-

A Churn That Churnsknone minute I have been in the dairy business all my life and have mans times churned for an hour fore butter would appear, so when I heard of a churn that would churn in a minute, I concluded to try it. Every day for a week I used it, and not only could I churn in a minute but I got more and better butter than with the common churn. This is very important information to butter makers. The churn works easily and will churn an ordinary churning in less than sixty seconds. I have sold two dozen of these churns in the past smooth. Every butter maker that has seen me churn in less than a minnte bought one. You con obtain all desired information regarding the churn by addressing J. F. Casey & . The New Hook Spoon Free to All. I read in the Christian Standard that Miss. A. M. Fritz. Station A., St. Louis, Mo., would give an elegant silver spoon to anyone sendind her ten 2-cent stamps, I sent for one and found it so useful that I showed it to my friends, and made $12,60 in two hours, taking orders for the spoon. The hook spoon is a household necessity, It cannot slip into the dish or cooking vessel, being held in place by a hook on the back. The spoon is something that housekeepers have needed ever since spoons were first in-vented. Anyone can get a sample spoon by sending ten 2-cent stamps to Miss Fritz.
